Virtualization models that widen your recruitment pool and foster employee retention

10 Essential Components of a Virtual Work Model

1. A team collaboration tool (e.g., Microsoft Teams/Slack)
2. Daily standing web-meeting (about 15 minutes) each day (require webcams)
3. A catalog of daily tasks per Person – in a collaborative system. Discuss during the morning meeting
4. Closed circle loops on daily task statuses at the end of the day (in Teams/Slack)
5. Highly organized weekly web meeting to align on goals for the week and to conduct proactive training
6. A controlled workspace with minimal background noise and distractions

10 Essential Components of a Virtual Work Model

7. Clearly defined and communicated performance measurements to detect and mitigate systemic personal distractions
8. Unlimited PTO (See #7 above)
9. Strong internet. Pay to upgrade the remote worker's internet connection (as needed)
10. Standardized equipment and work protocols
 - Company Managed VOIP Phone Service (No Hard Phones)
 - Office-grade, background canceling headsets
 - Background protocols (or requirement to blur the background)
 - Use remote device controls (e.g., Microsoft Intune/Active Directory) for IT services
 - Task Management for Administrative and Client Tasks (More on this in an Upcoming Slide)

Why Deploy a Virtual Work Model?

- For the context of this event: Greatly streamlines recruitment of highly qualified team members and Fosters greater employee retention
 - Hire from anywhere in the U.S. (I know...multi-state nexus. But...it's worth it!)
 - The ongoing economic impacts of COVID are still driving mass migration within the U.S.
 - A large percentage of the U.S. population remains concerned by (and/or particularly vulnerable to) COVID
 - Fosters strongly work-life harmonization – reducing the propensity for employee burnout*
- Powerful tools emerged – accelerated by COVID – that make this model increasingly viable.

*Note: The inverse may also be true. Monitor team productivity and workload heavily in virtual employment models

Managing Documents in WFH Environments

Woodard Recommends

- Use company-managed cloud backup with utilities installed on each local workstation...and check regularly!
- Sync the PC's Desktop, Documents and Downloads folders to Cloud Storage Systems
- Use folder mapping for the remote folder storage locations
- Use a collaboration tool for document collaboration or integrate cloud store

Microsoft OneDrive

Microsoft Teams

Managing Communications in WFH Environments

- Use a collaborative solution
- Tag people to call attention to essential posts or requested information/responses
- Create company policies around the use of important and urgent tags
- Read through all posts for all channels/teams in which you are invited every day. This is your company's "newspaper."
- Have fun. Use GIFs, use a Water Cooler Conversations channel, tell jokes, etc.

Managing Tasks in a WFH Environment

Deploy a Task/Ticket Management Solution for administrative task as well as cyclical and non-cyclical client production tasks.

Segment 3

Building a culture that empowers your team and reduces employee turnover

10 Ways to Build a Compelling Culture

1. Establish a vision, mission and purpose for the company and cast the vision regularly
2. Establish and strongly reinforce company values
3. Drive performance through measurements (with rewards) rather than oversight and supervision
4. Create a formal chart of roles and responsibilities and clearly communicate which team members are in which roles
5. Develop your team members. Conduct monthly team meetings (virtual works here) focused on proactive learnings, especially around professional and team interactions*

*Books written by Patrick Lencioni are a great resource for these meetings!

10 Ways to Build a Compelling Culture

6. Be generous with employee benefits (e.g., retirement plans, accidental medical riders, flexible spending accounts, and unlimited paid time off)
7. Evaluate perpetually: Be quick to confront and equally quick to move on
8. Splurge on a company-wide annual retreat to brainstorm around problems and innovations and to align on annual objectives and measurements
9. Meet often...but meet with efficiency and intention
10. Hire for culture fit and fire team members who are counter-cultural...even if they are high performing.
